

COMPASS

Congratulations to:

Phoebe, Lucy and Emilie on completing their Anti-Bullying Ambassadors Training

The Anti-Bullying Ambassador programme is part of the charity, the Diana Award. After her tragic death in 1997, The Diana Award was set up in 1999 to continue Princess Diana's Legacy of love, compassion, service to others and above all her belief that young people can change the world. Young people from any background and any walk of life can be inspirational role models.

Since 1999, the Diana Award has recognised 39,000 ordinary young people who have made an extraordinary difference to their community.

And of course The Diana Award Anti-Bullying Ambassador programme exists to help young people and adults in schools tackle and prevent bullying!
